

Leaning into Client Spirituality

Instead of not believing in an afterlife, Liz is actually a very devout Catholic. She has a very strong emotional pull toward MAID for all of the reasons she has shared. However, MAID is considered morally wrong within her religious community and her own belief system. She does not know anyone in her religion community who holds different beliefs. She reveals that the not-for-profit that she and her partner worked for was funded through the Catholic church. She worries that she risks her position in the afterlife, yet she is increasingly convinced that this is what she wants and needs.