

Cloze exercise: Describing the skin of customers with adjectives

Hairdressers need to know about their customers' skin in order to choose cosmetic treatments.

Some customers have great skin. This skin has no anomalies at all and is called _____ skin. This skin is _____ and _____.

Many customers have _____ skin – especially in winter when the sun is not shining that much. The color of the skin is nearly _____. In summer, some customers have _____ and _____ skin.

Some customers also like to decorate their skin with permanent colors. They have _____ skin. Older customers have special needs. These customers have _____ skin which needs a special treatment. The skin of older customers can also look dehydrated and discolored and is then called _____ skin.

Some customers do not have good skin; they have very _____ skin. This skin tends to be tender and is called _____ skin. The skin can be _____, _____ and _____ when it does not produce enough oil and lacks moisture. When the skin starts producing too much oil the skin can become _____. Too much oil can lead to pimples which can result in customers having _____ skin. This skin is often _____ and can even become _____ when specific bacteria is on the skin. This skin is often irritated and is called _____ skin.

It is very important for hairdressers to know that!

Fill in the following words:

dry, normal, sensitive, pale, oily, uneven, white, acne-prone, dark, problematic, reddened, smooth, rough, tanned, tattooed, ashy, blemish-prone, mature, flaky, moisturized